Makarios, Turks and British Seek to Reverse Cyprus Coup

By Richard Eder LONDON, July 17 (NYT).— Archbishop Makarios, who fled Cyprus yesterday after a coup. arrived here this morning and conferred with Prime Minister

Harold Wilson and Foreign Secretary James Callaghan, This evening, the Premier of Turkey, Bulent Ecevit, arrived from Ankara for a working dinner with Mr. Wilson and Mr. Cal-restore to power the archbishop and his policy of independence from both Greece and Turkey that has served to maintain a difficult peace in the island during the last 10 years.

With pressures growing Turkey for military action to undo what is widely regarded as an effort by the Greek government to take over Cyprus, Britain is in a difficult position.

Politically, the British, the Turks and Archbishop Makarios share a common objective. In an address to the House of Commons today, Mr. Callaghan made it plain that Britain has aligned itself against Greece,

But differences may arise over the methods to be pursued. The British government is reluctant to use more than diplomatic pressure on Greece-publicly, at least. The Turkish government takes the position that, if diplomatic pressure does not work quickly, military action will be necessary.
Archibishop Makarios has said only that he hopes force will not have to be used.

Mr. Wilson's talks with the Turkish Premier continued late tonight and there was no indication how much agreement on tachis arrival in London, Mr. Ecevit eased the atmosphere considerably by stating that any military attack on Cyprus could be ruled out for the time being.

"We are after a peaceful solution," he said.

Apparent Differences The complications in reaching a concerted policy in the Cyprus crisis are compounded by apparent differences between Britain and the United States. A report from Washington says that the United States, though publicly uncommitted, has in fact assistance, the report said. IIt said that advocates of the archbishop in the State Department had reportedly hoped an American declaration in his behalf, as a lever to topple the military leadership of Brig. Gen. [The secretary's rationale was that the United States depended strategically on its air and sea bases in Greece and would do nothing to jeopardize them, the report said.)

There was no official comment here tonight on this question. A British source noted only that Mr. Callaghan had seemed to offer Archbishop Makarios the hope of American support by telling him that he would be in touch with Mr. Kissinger to coordinate Brit-ish and American policy.

A source close to Archbishop Makarios remained optimistic that, when he goes to New York tomorrow to put his case before the UN Security Council, he will not lack American support.

The first and most dramatic development in a day that seemed to recall, for a bit, the years when London was regularly the scene of major international decisions, was the arrival of the archbishop.

JERUSALEM, July 17 (NYT). -U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon conferred with Israelileaders today on ways to bein in-crease American investment in Israel and other steps to close Israel's growing payments deficit.

In a separate meeting with Premier Yitzhak Rabin and top members of his government, Mr. Simon discussed practical ways of implementing the pledge of longterm military and economic assistance that President Nixon made during his visit here last month. The two countries agreed to establish four binational committees to work out detailed proposals on investment, trade, raw materials and energy and the exchange of technology. EEC Import Ban On Beef Hailed By Policy Chief

BRUSSELS, July 17 (IHT)—
The package of compromise measures agreed to today by European Economic Community farm ministers, to prevent stocks of surplus beef from growing, was warmly received by Pierre Lardinots, European commissioner for agricultural policy.

Mr. Lardinois said that the EEC decision to impose a ban on beef imports until Oct. 31 "will do much to restore the Community beef market in the coming months." . He daimed that the measures also would pay for themselves because the cost of storing the currently 113,600 ton beef "mountain" had to be offset against the cost of the new mea-SUITES.

In addition to the import ban, EEC ministers agreed on:

• Special retention payments for farmers (payable at slaughter). to enable them to hold cattle on farms over the winter. • The go-shead for social pro-possis which will give old age pensioners and others $2 worth of free beef each month. This will be optional on national sovernments and full details are to be worked out by the Department of Social Welfare.

VASHINGTON, July 17 (WP). strike Locals must confirm their action.

The Ohio strike had spread to 24 prisons and state mental hospitals and a union leader had promised to "close Ohio down."

Meanwhile, National Airlines laid off most of its $,000 employees for the duration of a machinists' strike that has grounded lights since Monday. A company spokes man estimated that the strike would cost National $1 million a day in lost service to 45 American cities and London

While the figure of 588 strikes is very high, the mediation service said, only 42 of them involve units of 1,000 or more employees, and only one involves more than 5,000 workers. Even so, a spokesman for the agency said that the sheer num-ber of strikes puts "a hell of a burden" on its 280 mediation

We have about two strikes per mediator, the spokesman said, "and some of the men are handling up to seven strikes at a time. ... Veterans here tell me they've never had a work load like this in their time at the service. They're working day and night, nonstop." Last year at this time, there were 329 fewer strikes in progress, idling 160,472 fewer workers. The best comparison with the current wave of walkouts, the agency said is the inflationary aftermath of World War II.

Labor's concern ever rising infistion coupled with the end of wage controls on April 30—set the stage for the outbreak of strikes. "During 1971, 72 and 73, we had those controls, and therefore there were lewer strikes. Labor knew they couldn't win very much by siriking, because the lid was on . .," the mediation agency spokesman said.

One-Year Contracts During the years of wage controls, several industries—including railroads, construction and food reverted to one-year contracts, largely because unions did not want to be stuck with lower wages if controls were lifted.

As a result, the spokesman said, about 4,500 contracts expire this year in the construction industry alone, more than doubling the precontrol-period rate of contract expiration.

This trend is mirrored in the current sirike figures: The construction industry accounts for nearly 30 per cent of the 588 strikes in progress.

Thirty-three of the current strikes—involving more than 12,500 workers—are centered in the food industry. The media-tion agency said that quite a few others involve the steel and autosupply industries.

While contracts have been signed in several key industries -steel, autos, aluminum, cans, clothing and shipping-other important contracts are due to expire soon.

Most immediate is the Bell Telephone contract with three unions representing about 750,000 workers. That contract ends tonight at midnight, and lastminute negotiations are in progress between union representatives and a single national bargaining unit for the more than 20 companies in the Bell system. Phone Accord Sees Although a news blackout surrounds the negotiations, the Associated Press quoted sources close to the talks as saying that agreement is near. Even if the talks fall, it would take at least two weeks to complete a strikeauthorization vote. Under pressure of a Nov. 12 contract expiration, the United Mine Workers, representing more than 80,000 miners, is preparing for negotiations with the nation's coal industry. In September and October, con-tracts end between about 60,000 union workers and the three major aerospace companies. And mber, contracts expire in the 50,000-worker railroad industry. Further fueling the growing willingness to strike are the generous settlements that unions are winning. In the last three months of 1973, settlements were averaging only 6.1 per cent increases in wages and benefits, but unions are now winning average increases of from 9 to 10 per

In Portland, Ore., welders have won a 38 per cent hourly-wage increase, to be spread over three years, and plumbers and pipefitters recently ended negotiations with a one year, 18 per cent pay hike. Chief federal mediator William Usery ir said that the individual worker is trying to keep ahead of the rising cost of living and is putting pressure on local union leadership to get the wages and benefits that will allow him to keep pace."

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif., July 17 (NYT). - President Nixon believes that the conviction of his former aide, John Ebrlich-man, was a blot on justice and that it would be "extremely difficult" for any Watergate figures to get a fair trial in Washington, D.C., according to a leader of a group of the President's supporters, Rabbi Baruch Korif. Rabbi Korff, the president of the National Citizens Committee for Fairness to the Presidency, met with Mr. Nixon yesterday at the Western White House here. Rabbi Korff presented the President with a copy of his new book. "The Personal Nixon: Staying on the Summit."

The book contains a long interview with Mr. Nixon, recorded by Rabbi Korff on May 13, as well as a series of written answers given by Mr. Nixon to the rabbi's written questions. The interviews provide few new facts, but do offer a rare glimpse of Mr. Nixon's personal reactions toward the Watergate affair and the impeachment proceedings. Fair Trial

In his May 13 interview, Mr. Nixon said that "I would have to argue very strongly that the individuals who have been hauled public, before committees and who also, in addition, have been slandered on television night after night through source stories and the rest, have had their chance for a fair trial destroyed."

Referring to Rep. Wiggins's re-Edwards, said that he did not know "how anyone could come to that conclusion and be a lawyer or a literate person." He said that the evidence built "a very strong case" for impeachment. The Judiciary Committee spent yesterday and much of last night questioning Charles Colson, the former White House special counsel, and Herbert Kalmbach, Mr. Nixon's former personal attorney. Mr. Doar skipped the closed hearing for the first time since the proceedings - began two months ago to complete the draft of a legal brief that well-placed officials said would outline and document four to six proposed articles of impeachment.

Although Mr. Doar was not available, an associate of his said privately that Mr. Doar had described the brief as a summation of evidence that led to an impeachment recommendation 35 the only logical finding.

"John says that it shouldn't be called an advocate's brief because that presumes there is more than one position to advocate," the associate said. "He says the facts lead to one conclusion, and he's prepared to argue it.

Rep. Edward Hutchinson of Michigan and Rep. Robert Mc-Clory of Illinois, the panel's se-nior Republicans, voiced resentment when they learned of the counsel's plans. They contended that the staff should be required to present what Rep. McClory called a "neutral" brief—one that would give arguments for and against specific articles of impeachment

Rep. Hutchinson directed Samuel Garrison, a Republican member of the inquiry staff, to collect evidence that might be used to rebut Mr. Doar's proposals. Republicans also began circulating a resolution that, if adopted by the committee, would instruct Mr. Doar to make an even-handed presentation. The nature of Mr. Doar's role

He said formal, public debate would take place next week and he expected the committee to begin voting on its findings as early as July 26. Evidence 'Overwhelming'

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Democretic National Chairman Robert Strauss yesterday described the Watergate evidence against President Nixon as "so devastating and overwhelming" that it would "incredible" if the House did not vote for impeachment. Mr. Strauss, who said he was speaking as "a lawyer of some

Nixon Ousts Director Of Anti-Poverty Unit

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif., July 17 (AP),-President Nixon yesterday accepted the forced resignation of Alvin Arnett as director of the Office of Economic Opportunity. A White House spokesman cited "irreconcilable differences" over OEO policy as the reason.

Mr. Arnett said he was dismissed because he fought to preserve programs of the antipoverty agency. Mr. Nixon will nominate to the post Bert Gallegos, 51, of Denver, who has been the agency's general counsel since 1972. The OEO is scheduled to expire on Sept. 30.

Mr. Nixon said that one of the reasons the Watergate affair had been written about so heavily in the press was that "I am not the press's favorite pin-up boy. If hadn't been for Watergate, there would probably have been something else. So, now they have this. But I will survive it and I just hope they will survive it with, shall we say, as much serenity as I have."

According -The dairy industry would have contributed more than $2 million toward President Nixon's re-election if White House aides and fund-raisers had not bungled plans for taking the money, according to testimony before the Senate Waterzate committee.

Harold Nelson, the former general manager of Associated Milk Producers, said repeatedly in sworn testimony which the committee released this week that there was no limit on the amount the dairy farm co-ops were prepared to contribute to Mr. Nixon's 1972 campaign.

He blamed White House fumbling over the establishment of "dummy committees" to accept the money in small installments as the principal reason for the industry's failure to give more.
"We told them from the word

'go' that we would make large contributions." Mr. Nelson said in executive-session testimony last Figures in Millions "At various times, $1 million.

$2 million, or even more money was discussed," he said. "And had they given us the names of the committees, they could have got-

Mr. Nelson said that he frequently pressed the White House to set up conduits for the money months before the President approved a controversial 1971 increase in milk price supports. But he said that he never got much action until weeks after Mr. Nixon granted the higher price supports—a decision that was announced March 25, 1971.

By then, Mr. Nelson indicated, he was embarrassed that the milk producers' promised contribu-tions had not yet been paid. "... It was a constant thing in the back of my mind that if we didn't get the names of these committees," he testified, "we might be read off just because of some inept-for want of a better term, I will say bureaucrat-

Dizzy Dean, a Baseball Folk Hero, Dies at 64

RENO. July 17 AP: Dizzy called Chickalah, Ark., and he Dean, 64 an Arkansas farm buy who pitched his way into the Baseball Hall of Fame with a blazing fastball, died early today in a hospital here.

Dean, who with his brother, Paul, formed a feared pitching duo for the St. Louis Cardinals 'Gashouse Gang' in the 1930s. had suffered a heart attack two

A spokesman at St. Mary's Hospital said that Dean died of heart failure after his condition had worsened vesterday afternoon.

Education in Baseball NEW YORK, July 17 (NYT),-His father was an itinerant sharecropper who wandered around the South picking cotton. His mother old. His own education ended in the second grade in a piace confessed later-"I didn't do so good in the first grade, either. But, despite all such handicaps and the Ozark country-boy image he carried into high places, Jay Hanna (Dizzy) Dean rose serenely and unflappably into a career as one of the best pitchers in modern baseball and as a folk here who brought great turns of the English language to radio and

He could be vague about de-tails of his early life and time. He suggested, on different occasions, that he had been born in Arkansas, Oklahoma and Mississippi. He estimated the date as 1911, or thereabouts. He even gave his formal name variously as Jay Hanna or Jerome Her man Dean. Then, when he reached the big leagues in 1930 at the age of 19, his career barely covered the decade and included only half a dozen seasons of frontrank pitching.

But wherever he came from, and however long he held the spotlight, few personalities commanded the public's attention as joyously as Dizzy Dean. In his first full season with the St. Louis Cardinals he won 18 games and led the National League in strikeouts and shutouts. In the following four seasons, he won 102 games, including 30 in 1934 and 28 in 1935. He once struck out 17 Chicago Cubs in nine innings. And in the 1934 World Series, he and his younger brother, Paul (Daffy) Dean, pitched two victories apiece while the "Gashouse Gang" of St. Louis defeated the Detroit Tigers, four games to three. When an injury shortened his baseball career a few years later. Dean switched his showmanship behind a microphone and broadcast games for the Cardinals and Browns in St. Louis and for the Yankees in New York. Then he attained new heights as an in-novator of language, coining words the way Casey Stengel coined paragraphs.

Come on, Tommy, hit that old patata," he once said with the partisanship of a full fan. This boy looks mighty hitterish to me." observed another time. "Boy, they was really scrummin' that ball over today, wasn't they?" he reported on another occasion. And when purists complained about his statement that a hase-run-ner "slud into third," he would reply in self-defense: "Paul and me didn't get much education."

His style proved so unusual that, in the summer of 1946, a group of Missouri school teachers complained to the Federal Communications Commission that Dean's broadcasts were "replete with errors in grammar and syntax" and were having "a bad effect on the pupils." But in the public debate that followed, powerful voices were raised to champlon Dean, including that of the prestigious periodical, the Saturday Review of Literature. Norman Cousins, the guiding spirit of the magazine, now titled Saturday Review World, extended his own approval of Dean's linguistic style to the great man's pitching style in these words:

"He was supposed to be as iast as Walter Johnson, and though he couldn't curve them and mix them up like the Great Matty [Christy Mathewson], his assortment was better than most. You were attracted by the graceful rhythm of his pitching motion; the long majestic sweep of his arm as he let the ball fly, the poised alertness after the pitch. That was what counted. and you knew it when batter after batter swung ineptly at pitches they couldn't even see." The man behind the fractured syntax and the fractured batting averages was a 6-foot-2-inch glant whose playing weight of 182 pounds expanded well above 200 broadcaster, public speaker, raconteur, rancher and golier. The consensus is that he was born Jan. 16, 1911. in Lucas, Ark. Columnist Red Smith partrayed him in The New York Times in

"As a ballplayer, Dean was a tion in which Joe DiMaggio plac-natural phenomenon, like the ed eighth). But by then, Dean Grand Canyon or the Great Barrier Reef. Nobody ever taught him baseball and he never had to learn. He was just doing what came naturally when a scout named Don Curtis discovered him on a Texas sandlot and gave him his first contract."

That was in the fall of 1929. and Dean later recalled that his "bonus" amounted to $300. He earned it the next season by winning 17 games at St. Joseph Mo., plus eight more at Houston in the Texas League. The Car-dinals promoted him to the majors around Labor Day and he pitched once-beating the Pittsburgh Pirates with a three-bitter.

He was still a teen-ager at the time, not far removed from the 16-year-old who had enlisted in the Army, where he supposedly wore his first pair of good shoes. But he was a teen-ager with absolute confidence in his baseball ability, and he demonstrated the confidence after his debut by boasting that he could "pitch St. Louis to the permant." The Cardinals responded by relegating him back to the minors in 1931, but he demonstrated his ability there by winning 26 games.

Branch Ricker, who was run-ning the Cardinals, brought Dean back to St. Louis to stay in 1932 and Dizzy won 18 times with 16 complete games and 191 strikecuts. Two years later, he touted Rickey on his brother Paul and in 1934, the Dean boys hurled 49 victories (30 by Dizzy) and pitched the Cardinals to the world

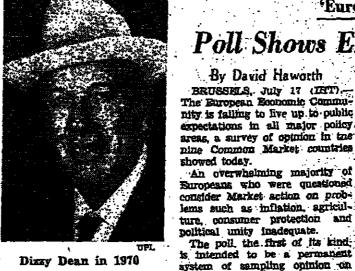

Dean was suspended briefly for insubordination that seeson and held out briefly for more money in mid-season, yet he finished the summer with a 30-7 won-lost record that included these highlights down the home stretch of the pennant race:

On Sept. 21, he pitched a threehitter against the Brookin Dodgers (Paul pitched a no-hitter in the second game of the doubleheader). Two days later, Dean relieved in both games of a coupleheader in Cincinnati, Two days after that, he went nine innings and beat Pittsburgh, 3-2. Three days later, he stopped Cincinnati, 4-0. And two days after that, he shut out the Reds again, 9-0. to clinch the pennant. Three days later, he beat Detroit in the opening game of the World

Things started to unwind in 1937, when Dean was struck on the left foot by a line drive while pitching in the All-Star Game in Washington, He suffered a broken toe but suffered more permanently when he tried to pitch despite the handican and subsequently ruined his right arm. So, in 1938. the Cardina's traded him to the Chicago Cubs for $185,000 and three players, did pitch in the World Series for the Cubs against the Yankees, but he was never his old fireballing self on the mound. of 30, he retired as a player with a career record of 150 victories and 83 losses for a winning percentage of .644, and an earned run average of 3.03. plications of Paying for What You Get," the two men attacked a number of current Air Force managerial concepts, alleging that people to operate in ways which are counterproductive for the force as a whole."

Specifically, the paper suggested that too many trained pilots dld not want to continue in active flying assignments, thus creating a perennial Air Force pilot shortage. That shortage, the paper charged, "is more than imagined because the Air Force has structured so many incentives to lure the pilot away from the

In another key area, the paper challenged the extensive educaconstantly being provided to Air Force officers.

The paper created a stir when presented at the closed military conference, known as the second annual interservice defense policy conference, and received personal attention from Eliott Richardson, then-secretary of defense. It further reached at least one member of Congress, who forwarded a list of more than 100 queries based on some of the paper's

Shortly after the conference concluded, all parties agree, Capts. Hamshek and Hogan were informed that their tour of duty at the academy was to be curtailed, and they were reassigned. They further were told that the reassignment had nothing to do with the presentation of their paper but, instead, resulted from the fact that they had unsuccessfully sought to resign the year before. In rebuttal, the two officers have noted in letters to the Air Force's inspector-general's office, which conducted an inquiry into their reassignment, that the their resignation requests in 1972 because it was determined that they were vitally needed to teach at the scademy

Schmidt Sees U.S.-Europe Tension Eased

BONN, July 17 (AP) Chancel-or Helmut Schmidt said today hat tension between the United States and its European allies las largely disappeared and that Atlantic relations now can be viewed in a "rather relaxed way." In an interview, he also said that inflation was an urgent problem that could endanger democratic society. He called on developed nations to set firmly to hold down prices. Mr. Schmidt said that since last year's Middle East war and the subsequent energy crisis, which put severe strains on the NATO alliance, Washington and Western Europe have recognized the necessity "to consult each

While Mr. Graham did not mention the World Council of Churches by name; his references to the floundering of the world were considered to be some of his strongest criticisms of the organization so far. Ecamenical Movement

The World Council, with more than 200 member bodies, is headquartered in nearby Geneva. Concern for the ecumenical move-ment, social and political dimensions of the Gospel and emphasis on social rather than personal salvation have long been its half-

Finally, guidelines were drawn up which called almost entirely for man with God." Evangelical Viewpoint

The evangelist, who is honorary chairman of the evangelization congress, also said that the evangelical point of view had not been adequately represented "at some of the other world church gatherings" an apparent reference to the World Council of

Mr. Graham laid the blame for the erosion of missionary and evangelical zeal to theological changes which "were subtly infiltrating Christian youth move-ments in the early 1900s. This paved the way for "the vast permissiveness of our day," according to Mr. Graham, because personal morality and the need for salvation through Christ alone were "drastically reinterpreted or diluted in some parts of the organized church.' Mr. Graham's comment about the Christian Gospel and Americanism was an apparent response to criticisms leveled at the evangelist in recent months by some churchmen who have felt he has been too closely aligned with the White House and President Nizon, and had not been vocal enough in condemning the Wa-

Nixon, Kissinger and Wiretaps

President Nixon's new letter on wiretapping substantially eases, though it does not end, the crisis hanging over his secretary of state. Mr. Rissinger had threatened to resign if he were not cleared of the suspicion that he lied at his confirmation hearing last September in denying having "initiated" wiretaps to plug "national security" leaks in 1969-71, To be sure, on May 22, 1973, Mr. Nixon had accepted full personal responsibility for those taps and had described Mr. Kissinger's role—as the secretary himself was to describe it in September and thereafter-only as helping supply the names of those who were tapped. Questions then arose, however, about both the accuracy of this version and about the extent of Mr. Nixon's continuing support for it.

First, material was leaked suggesting at first glance certain literal discrepancies between Mr. Kissinger's September testimony and FBI records of the time. Then, a White House tape was leaked in which Mr. Nixon was quoted as saying on Feb. 28, 1973; about Mr. Kissinger's role in the taps, "he asked that it be done." Finally, when, last month in Salzburg, Mr. Kissinger threatened to resign if his word were not upheld, President Nixon conspicuously refrained from upholding it, thus raising the further ouestion of whether the secretary of state still enjoyed the confidence of his chief. In the ansparing atmosphere of Watergate Washington, given Mr. Nixon's understandable preoccupation with his own political survival. it was bound to be asked whether by one devious strategy or another, he was letting Mr. Kissinger go.

Well, events have moved on. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee is immersed in its inquiry into whether Secretary Kissinger told it the truth last fall. After hearing a string of FBI witnesses. Chairman J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., has declared that the alleged Kissinger-FBI discrepancies, even if real, are "not of any great substance." No one else on the committee seems inclined to disagree. As for Mr. Nixon, he waited a long month-a delay itself raising questions-but he then did offer the committee a letter reaffirming his May, 1973, statement that in the wiretaps at issue, Mr. Klssinger was "operating under my specific authority" and

"earrying out my express orders." So, though Mr. Kissinger himself is to testify next Tuesday and Gen. Haig on July 30, the committee now seems disposed to give the secretary the rousing vote of confidence for which he appealed a month ago. Mr. Kissinger's status in the White House may not be entirely clear but his standing on Capitol Hill is tail. We see no substantial reason to suspect that he will not remain secretary of state.

That hardly ends the matter of the wiretaps. If their political aspect is fading, their legal aspect is still very much alive. In leaks, Mr. Kissinger has been identified as having given the FBI the names of 13 national security officials and four journalists who were tapped. Of this number, three of his erstwhile national security aides have filed civil suits against Mr. Kissinger (and others) charging that the FBI taps on them--obtained without a warrant or court order--were illegal. The penalty is a fine of up to $100 a day.

Since being challenged, Mr. Nixon and Mr. Kissinger have claimed that the taps at issue were legal at the time. But this is in dispute. Early on, this administration advanced a claim that, under the 1968 federal wiretap law, it could wiretap or bug without court order in cases of domestic security or foreign intelligence. In 1972, however, the Supreme Court rejected by an 8-to-0 vote the government's contention that it did not need a warrant for domestic security taps. The three suits by former Kissinger aides challenge the contention that no warrant is needed for a foreign-intelligence tap-the kind which the government says applies here. Judge Gerhard Gesell, in his charge to the Ehrlichman jury, asserted, "Even the proper concern of the President of the United States and others in high office to prevent leaks of national security information would not have justified a warrantiess search of Dr. Fielding's office without his permission"a tap, of course, is a search. It should not be necessary to note that rulings in court, not assertions of legality by the government, will determine whether the wiretap law was being properly observed by all concerned, including the President as well as Secretary and the stubborn resistance by forces loyal cern with dramatic action. Emphasizing to his elected government against the wouldbe usurpers controlled from Greece provide President of Cyprus, Britain not only gave international action on Cyprus that must not be squandered. Secretary-General Waldheim's appeal to Greece and Turkey for "maximum restraint" on Cyprus, issued in advance of Tuesday's United Nations Security Council meeting, was only the necessary, formal preliminary.

Much more than mere "restraint" is required. It is imperative-not only for the integrity of Cyprus but for the future of the United Nations and the cause of collective security—that the military dictatorship in Greece not be allowed by the international community to get by with this open sub-

> If Washington added its weight to Britain's request, the jittery military rulers in Athens would have no alternative to calling home the 650 Greek officers. If they departed, the self-styled "government of national salvation," headed by the sadistic Nikos Sampson, would not survive for 24 hours.

A personal appeal to the Security Council by Archbishop Makarios would provide one of the more dramatic moments in the 29year history of the United Nations. It would also recall the poignant moment in 1936 when Emperor Haile Selassie stood before the UN's predecessor at Geneva and warned it of the perils of inaction in the face of aggression against a small country. That meniory is only one of many reasons why the United Nations-and the United Statescannot be indifferent to the fate of Cyprus.

Moscow and Cyprus

There can be little doubt that the Soviet leadership will have difficulty in coming to terms with a situation in which Greek officers hold power on Cyprus. Even a close association, still more an actual "Enosis." between this strategically important island and NATO-member Greece would be assessed in Moscow as a severe blow to its Mediterranean and Middle East interests. The Soviet Union is therefore unlikely to confine itself to mere lip-service in its attacks on the putsch leaders. After all, the Kremin disposes of a powerful means of direct intervention in the shape of the island's Commanist Ake! party.

Considering the Use of Plutonium for Peace

By Paul L. Leventhal

WASHINGTON-Peaceful pintonium can be the death of us all-not will be necessarilybut can be. The present course of the United States and France to step up the exporting of nuclear-power technology to nations willing to pay the cost is a form of insanity that may overtake the world before its awesome dimensions are realized.

Consider this: The nuclear power plants that the President wants to sell to Egypt are each capable of producing 150 kilo-grams (352 pounds) of plutonium as a by-product every year. After reprocessing, this plutonium will amount to more than 700 pounds of weapons-grade material suitable for the fashioning of dozens of bumbs of the size of the one dropped on Nagazaki.

Consider this also: The Atomic Energy Commission plans to license over the next quartercentury 1,000 nuclear-power plants in the United States, which will produce 50 per cent of our electricity and also 660,000 pounds of plutonium a year by the year

Worldwide projections for that date are for 3,000 reactors, inciuding American generating 40 per cent of electrical needs and more than two million pounds of plutonium a year. These projections are based on the development of the so-called "breeder" reactor, which will generate more clutonium than it

Safeguards

All this, of course, is to be done under adequate—the industry does not like the term "strict"-safeguards. A recent study by a team of outside consultants for the AEC. which was released in May by Sen, Abraham A. Ribicoff after he obtained it from the AEC. reported that current regulations are "entirely inadequate" to protec: weapons-grade nuclear material in the private sector from thaft and subsequent fashioning into terrorist bombs. Most commercial reactors today do not use eapons-grade uranium or plutohium. If safeguards are so poor -and dangerous-now, what will the situation be like after 1989, when the AEC predicts that commercia: power reactors will be producing and using more plutonium than will the government neapers pregram? And also consider this: The AEC conducted a secret study to determine whether two physicists with decreates, fresh out of graduate school, could design an storie borns from current, pubhe literature, assuming they could obtain the necessary plutonium or highly enriched manuam. It has since been disclosed that the young physicists succeeded in designing a fission device that AEC experts determine would exploce with a force within 10 per cent of the yield predicted by the would-be bomb-makers.

And, finally, consider this: Fintenaum is the most toxic substance known to man. One thirtymillionth of an ounce-less than a police grain-if inhaled or saulioned will cause cancer. Thus even if a crudely fashioned bomb fails to emplode, partial detonation will convert it into a terribly noisonous dispersion device. Also, the radioactive half-life of protonium is 23,640 years, which means it retains its toxicity for at least 100,000 years.

Conclusions

These facts lead to three basic

First, the nuclear-power industry generates the world's must explosite and poisonous element. Second, this element can be facilioned by skilled, determined izuniduals into atomic bombs er deadly dispersion devices.

Third, present efforts to sategrand this clement from outside their or internal diversion nave been found to be entirely inadequate in the world's most sophisleated nuclear mution, the United States.

What, then, are we in for if we and our peaceful nuclear competitors like France continue to view the exporting of this technology as a solution to our bulance-of-payments problems?

WAVERLEY ROOT

A Fish With a Gift for Names

THE chub, says Webster smiffishly, "is hitle valued as food." More interest was displayed in this fish by W. St. Leger, who wrote:

> There is a nne slujjed charender, A charender, or chub, That decks the rural parender, The pavender, or pub. Wherein I eat my gravender, My gravender, or grub.

It is true that Mr. St. Leger seems to have been referring to the chub not as a food fish but as a game trophy it can be taken on a fly, among other methods, and puts up an initially strong, but disappointingly short, resistance, and to have been less interested in the fish itself than in the peculiarity of its names ("chavender" has now disappeared from the English language).

The chub strictly speaking a European freshwater fish, has indeed a gift for acquiring names. In French the commonest species, which may reach a length of 2 feet and a weight of 12 pounds in Mr. St. Leger's England. 8 pounds is tops, is called by various forms of the same wordherenne, cherene, chevesne, chevanne, chevaneau, charanne, charaine, chcrasson, and, in the He-de-France, where, other Frenchmen say, people "talk pointed ' parler pointu), the contraction ch'rene has even turned into juene; and there are a few other popular names too, for instance rotisson and rilain (nasty, a nickname which indicates no high regard for the chub! A variety which departs from the normal coloring of brownish back and silvery belly, being ashen, is called meunicr (miller). for it looks as if it were covered with flour. A smaller species sup to 12 inches; found in fastflowing streams in southern France, is called andrise, aubour, prayelet or dard. The smallest of all 16 inches), in the Rhone and its tributaries. is the souling soutte or blaceon. To which varieties the words cabot, chabot and testard refer, deponent

This adds up to a lot of names for a fish supposed to be held in little esteem, yet in France Webster is upheld to the extent that chub is eaten usually only in the families of fishermen who have taken it for sport. It is not offered by fishmongers or restaurants, at least not under 113 own name, or names, though it may appear, if small, in a mixed fry, or if large, in a freshwater fish chowder, accompanied by other more delectable fish. However, Webster is slightly amended in France by a gastronomic distinction based on habital. Chub, especially the large varieties, like many of the fish to which they are related (carp. harbel, tench, bream, dace, often frequent still water with muddy bortoms, which impart a muddy raste to their flesh; but chub taken in fast-moving waters, especially the randoise, can be relatively

The French name for chub is derived from popular Latin and means "big head" (lestard comes from a word meaning "head" 100), which describes the most obvious characteristic of the fish. Hence in America. where from the ichthy-ologist's point of view, the chub does not exist. the many fish somewhat indiscriminately called chub, are usually bigheaded. When the synpaym used for "chub" in the United States is chevin. chavaine or chevesne it should mean, if the speaker is linguistically sophisticated, the European chub. Otherwise the name is given to several American fish only distantly related to the European Leuciscus cephalus. The river chub, or hornyhead chub, is Hybopsis kentuckiensis; the silver chub is Semotilus corporalis: and the chub mackerel and chub sucker are much too far removed from the original to deserve the name at all. The word "chub" is also applied to a number of American fish with other names of their own—the fallfish, the borned dace, the golden shiner, the squawfish, and even the large-mouthed black bass; and though the chub is properly a freshwater fish, its name has been given to some saltwater varieties the Bermuda chub, the tautog, the spotfish and the America, like France, supplies an amendment to Webster's unfavorable verdict for the case of the lake herring, fished commercially in Lakes Michigan and Superior, where it is called the chub. It is considered by many as one of the two best food ishes of those lakes, the other being the whitefish, which is sometimes called a chub too. Lake whitefish are not only excellent broiled or planked they also produce a caviar substitute, with its eggs dyed gray, usually with cuttlefish ink, a process also used in Europe for various fish eggs which masquerade as caviar. Smoked whitefish is considered a delicacy, but some persons prefer smoked lake chub, which when so treated turns an appetizing golden color and acquires a highly satisfactory delicacy of flavor.

BNP in Moscow

Bonque Nationale de Paris was recently authorized to convert its present office in Moscow into a permanent Representative Office accredited to the State Bank of the U.S.S.R., the Gosbank.

The Office of the Banque Nationale de Paris will be headed by Mr. Victor Bakchine, assistant manager and consultant at the BNP's Direction of Treasury and International Affairs. He will be assisted in Moscow by Mr. Vladimir Golovanov and in Paris by Mr. Roger Delous.

This office will serve as a link between French exporters and importers on the one hand, and the U.S.S.R. Bank for Foreign Trade (Vneshtorgbank) and the banks of the Comecon countries on the other hand. BNP will make its experience available to these exporters and importer in their search for new markets during the negotiation and implementation of contracts.

In the same spirit of co-operation, Banque Nationale de Paris and Vneshtorgbank have just signed a financial agreement by which the two banks will jointly finance the installments and local expenses linked to joint contracts signed between French and Soviet suppliers and buyers from third countries for the supply of capital goods and large projects.

This agreement is part of the general policy of co-operation between France and U.S.S.R., as defined in the agreement signed in October 1971 and in the 10-year program of 1973.

THE DREYFUS OFFSHORE TRUST N. V. I. L.

On 16th July, 1974, The Dreyfus Offshore Trust N.V. ("Offshore") transferred substantially all its assets, except a cash reserve of $220,600, to The Dreyfus Intercontinental Investment Fund N.V. ("Intercontinental") in exchange for 1.161,205.591 shares of Common Stock of Intercontinental, at adjusted net asset value per share of Common Stock was $8.23, and Intercontinental's unaudited net asset value per share of Common Stock was $8.23, and Intercontinental's unaudited net asset value per stare of Common Stock was $11.12. On 16th July, 1974, there were outstanding 2,693,704 shares of Intercontinental Common Stock, including the shares issued to Offshore, and 1,570,400 shares of Offshore Common Stock (of which 125,300 shares will be redeemed before 16th September, 1974, pursuant to notices of redemption delivered to Offshore). It is anticipated that the holder of each share of Offshore Common Stock outstanding on 16th July, 1974, will receive approximately .740 share of Intercontinental Common Stock, subject to the adjustments described below which are expected to be minor.

The shares of Intercontinental Common Stock received by Offshore will be held by Offshore until completion of liquidation proceedings required under Netherlands Antilles law. Liquidation will occur on 16th September, 1974, or as soon thereafter as practicable. After completion of liquidation proceedings, the shares of Intercontinental Common Stock held by Offshore will be credited to Offshore's Shareholders on a pro rate basis. The number of shares of Intercontinental Common Stock held by Offshore will equal the number of shares of Intercontinental Common Stock received on 16th July, 1974, reduced by the number of shares of Intercontinental Common Stock received on 16th July, 1974, reduced by the number of shares of Intercontinental Common Stock redeemed at net asset value in the event the cash reserve is insufficient to meet Offshore's liabilities, or increased by the number of shares of Intercontinental Common Stock purchased at net asset value without a sales charge in the event there are funds in the cash reserve after payment of all Offshore's known liabilities. It is expected that the cash reserve will be adequate to meet Offshore's liabilities.

After 16th September, 1974, when the shares of Intercontinental Common Stock are credited to Offshore's Shareholders, the certificates evidencing shares of Offshore Common Stock will be treated for all purposes as certificates for the credited shares of Intercontinental Common Stock, and Offshore's Shareholders will become Intercontinental Shareholders entitled to all rights of Shareholders under Intercontinental's Articles of Incorporation, including the right to redeem shares, to receive dividends and to vote at shareholders' share certificates for new certificates of Intercontinental, Offshore's Shareholders should make that exchange in order to obtain new Intercontinental certificates bearing dividend coupons. New Intercontinental certificates will not be issued in exchange for Offshore certificates until after 16th September, 1974. An Offshore Shareholder should, therefore, retain his Offshore certificates until 18th September, 1974.

At the time an Offshore Shareholder transmits his Offshore certificates to be exchanged for Intercontinental certificates, he may take one of the steps described below.

1. An Offshore Shareholder may elect to have the full number of shares of Intercontinental Common Stock credited to him by Offshore, including fractions of a share, held for him in an Intercontinental voluntary account at Intercontinental's Custodian, Montreal Trust Company. 15 King Street West, Toront., Ontario, Canada. An Offshore Shareholder who elects to have his shares held in a voluntary account must send to Montreal Trust Company his Company to establish a voluntary account and to deposit therein the shares of Intercontinental Common Stock evidenced by the Offshore certificates. A Shareholder who deposits his shares of Intercontinental Common Stock in a voluntary account may later receive certificates for his shares from Montreal Trust Company at any time upon request. In addition, a Shareholder who establishes a voluntary account with Montreal Trust Company will for one year after 16th September, 1974, have the right to make purchases, at net asset value without a sales charge, of additional shares of Intercontinental Common Stock in an amount up to the number of shares of Intercontinental Common Stock in an amount up to the number of shares of Intercontinental Common Stock credited to him by Offshore and deposited in the voluntary account. To obtain more information about the Intercontinental voluntary account and the form of instructions to Montreal Trust Company, contact Intercontinental or Dreyfus Management International GmbH at the addresses below.

2. If an Offshore Shareholder desires to have bearer certificates of Intercontinental with dividend coupons attached, he may send his Offshore certificates to Montreal Trust Company for exchange and certificates, in denominations of 10, 100 or 500 shares, representing the highest number of shares of Intercontinental Common Stock to which he is entitled to the nearest 10 shares, will be issued to him and any remaining shares of Intercontinental Common Stock less than 10 shares will be placed in a voluntary account for the benefit of the shareholder at Montreal Trust Company. In lieu thereof, the Offshore Shareholder may request that a check for an amount equal to the net asset value of any remaining shares of Intercontinental Common Stock less than 10 shares be sent to him. That net asset value will be determined on the date Intercontinental's assets are valued next following the date on which Montreal Trust Company receives the Offshore certificates.

3. An Offshore Shareholder may, without charge, redeem his shares of Intercontinental Common Stock for cash at the net asset value of the shares of Intercontinental Common Stock on the valuation date next following the receipt by Intercontinental of the request and the Shareholder's certificates.

Questions and requests for further information about Intercontinental should be forwarded to:

Citicorp Issue Said to Be Set For July 31 Concern's Profit Rises 25 Per Cent in Quarter By Michael C. Jensen

NEW YORK, July 17 (NYT) .-Citicorp is planning to offer its $850 million controversial and novel type of security to the pub-lic next Wednesday, according to one of the leaders of the issue's ınderwriting syndicate.

Paul Miller, president of First Boston Corp., said he expected the prospectus for the issue would be made available tomorrow, in preparation for the offering next week. "We have the Fed's approval and a reasonable expectation that the SEC is going to operate on this schedule," Mr. Miller said in a telephone interview.

The offering which originally had been scheduled to take place a week ago, has become the focal point of an engry controversy that includes Congress, the na-tion's thrift institutions, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Federal Reserve

Citicorp representatives have been meeting with the SEC this week to iron out differences of opinion on disclosure matters reating to the offering.

A Citicorp spokesman declined to comment on the target date for the offering. The bank hold-ing company, which is the parent of First National City Bank, has consistently refused to make any statement about the offering since the controversy arose.

At issue is the question of whether such an offering would pull money needed for housing out of the nation's savings banks and savings and loan associations.
Citicorp has already agreed to modify the terms of its original proposal, which had called for floating-rate securities that could be redeemed at six-month intervals beginning this December.

The Fed indicated last week that Citicorp had agreed to delay the first redemption date until June 1, 1976. At the same time, however, Citicorp extended the notes' guaranteed interest rate floor of 9.7 per cent from Nov. 30, 1974, to June 1, 1975. The subsequent interest rate would be one percentage point above the average rate on threemonth Treasury bills.

Meanwhile, Citicorp said yesterday its net operating earnings for the second quarter rose 25 per cent from year-earlier levels.

the trend toward sharply higher bank earnings. The company said its first-half domestic earnings, representing about 39 per cent of total earn-ings, had increased by 32 per cent over the comparable period of 1973. International earnings had increased 22 per cent. Citicorp said its provision for possible losses on loans charged to earnings in the second quarter was $31 million, against $15.5 million for the comparable period in

Regarding the failure of Bankhaus Herstatt in West Germany, Citicorp said it had a claim of about $10 million pending, and had attached certain of Herstatt's assets in Germany, but had not made any charge to its bad debt

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Pan Am, TWA Losses Estimated Pan American and Trans World Airlines are likely to lose slightly more than $70 million each in calendar 1974, a Civil Aeronautics Board official has told the Senate aviation subcommittee. Robert Sherer, director of the CAB's bureau of economics, says his estimate is bas-ed on an analysis of forecasts made by an interagency group as a result of their visits to Pan Am and TWA earlier this year. "The board's analysis at this time showed a range in the low $70 million each for Pan American and TWA as the likely losses for 1974." The CAB has recommended temporary operating subsidies for the two airlines to help cifset large increases in fuel prices. The Department of Transportation opposes subsidies at this time, believing the airlines can meet the higher fuel prices through improved operations and flight and route consolidations in some cases.

Matsushita Offers Tape Duplicator Matsushita Electric Industrial of Japan says it has developed a cartridge video tape duplicating system. The device enables a copy of a 30-minute tape to be made in less than three minutes. The system is comprised of a master tape processor priced at 5 million yen (about $17,400; and a printer priced at 4.5 million yen. The system uses the contact printing process whereby master and slave tapes are wound tightly together onto one reel at high speed. A magnetic field is applied to the combined tape reel for one second and the individual tapes are then rewound onto separate reels. A master tape can be used for making at least 1,000 reproductions, Matsushita says.

Courtaulds Profit Hit by Blast

Courtaulds expects that second-half profits will not be larger than those of the first half as a result of the recent explosion at its Flix-borough plant and the effects of increased costs. A)though no figures were given at the annual meeting, unaudited results for the first six months of the fiscal year will be not too dissimilar from those of the second haif of last year," the company notes. Lord Kearton, chairman, says the Flixborough disaster will hurt Courtsulds for some years. The plant supplied about 70 per cent of the caprolactum needs in Britain for making nylon.

Stock Rally Pushes Dow Up 9 Points

Report on Economy Cited for Upturn

NEW YORK, July 17 (IHT),— Stocks rallied strongly on the New York Stock Exchange late trading today, overcoming a lag of four to five points in the Dow Jones industrial average through most of the session. Brokers said some favorable U.S. economic news helped the market recovery. The Dow average closed with a gain of 9 points to 784.97. Advancing issues led gainers about 780 to 535 at the close. Declines held a 7-to-5 edge through most of the session. Volume totaled 11.32 million shares compared with 9.92 million yesterday. Brokers noted that the market began to recover following a report that the Commerce Department is expected to report tomorrow that the economy as measured by the gross national product pulled out of recession in the second quarter because of increased productivity and easing food and oil prices. Also in the economic housing starts in June rose 8 per cent from May, and the growth in personal income slowed a bit

Raybestos-Manhattan gained 1 to 16 1/2, and Stone Container tacked on 1 1/4 to 11 1/4. Both reported that second-quarter net improved.

Pittston was down 1 1/8 to 29 3.4, and Eastern Gas & Fuel was 16 1/2, off 1/2. The Wall Street Journal reported "there are a number of ... solid reasons why—four months before the deadline—people on both sides expect a strike by the nation's . . . organized coal min-ers, a strike that could cripple the U.S. economy."

Du Pont gained 1 1/4 to 151 1/4. The issue had been falling sharply since the company's report Monday of almost unchanged second-quarter net.

Glamour stocks were among strong issues. Polaroid gained 3 1/4 to 32 1/8, IBM was 217 3/4, up 4, Eastman Kodak 96 3/4, ahead 2, Texas Instruments 91 1/2, up 1 1/2 and Avon Products 34 1/2, up 1 3/4.
Prices moved higher in light trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex index rose 0.76 to 77.73. Syntex rose 1 1/8 to 42 3/4, and khukhmas or accumulated wisdom, to the cracker-barrel country, has never lost the sense of wonderment that seizes the provincial New Yorker on his foreys beyond the city line. Southern Jews, indeed, speaking in those accents so un Jewish, so unlike rasping New York throatiness, so different from the familiar intonations of Minsk Bukovina and Kovno that are New York staples.

Golden has trumpeted the glories of New York Jews in books past. He has written about the South from his home in Charlotte, N.C., and has never hesitated to speak out on the shame of the nation, its history of race relations with its blacks. When he writes, it is with a tinge of humor and a sense of faith in man's innate virtue. admittedly a down-deep resource that is difficult to mine. Because-he doesn't bludgeon, there's a tendency to shrug him off as a combatant, but, in truth, a New York Jew who can sound off as a liberal out of town and still maintain friendships in all direc-tions is not to be sneered at.

This rambling account of Jews in Dixie, for all of its failings either as literature or as history serves as a reminder of the virtue of ethnic histories. Some historians have rather cavalierly smiffed at the ethnic history because it presents one group or another out of proportion for its role in general history. My son recently confessed that in his early years he believed the revolution had been won by Haym Solomon (Hebrew school) and Crispus Attucks (public school). But ethnic history does some-thing beyond the ken of caviling historians. It gives a group a sense of identification with the past of the general community, a feeling that it should get what it deserves from its part in the shared experience not as a gift of tolerance by the faceless majority. Even more recently, we are now learning that one group's experience should be made the common knowledge of all.

"Our Southern Landsman" introduces Jewish compatricts who live south of the Mason Dixon line. It is a far cry from "Only in America" and "For 2c Plain." Here are the Jews, as he notes who grew up without pastrami sandwiches, without benefit of rye bread, and, whichever way you slice them, they are a colorkhukhmas, or accumulated wis point, which is Golden's and comes across in his own witty terms.

"Our Southern Landsman (landsman, as if you didn't know, is the Yiddish word for compatriot, and it is pronounced as lontemon) in in many ancient cases, about Southerners who were Jews rather than about Jewish life in the South Later with the same sort of immigration that came to New York the Jewish community came into its own and identified with Jewi elsewhere, but, by and large, that was later.

In addition to a treasury of exotic Judaica, Golden describes modern Jewish communities, their golf clubs, their generosity to charities. Jewish and otherwise, and their general willingness to go along with the social and racial attitudes of the white majority.

"One of the points I am at pains to convey to Jewish readers is that during this black revolution they are getting a free ride." Golden writes "Usually I make this point when I am asked about black auti-Semitism. A black anti-Semite, I explain is about as convincing as a Jewish white supremacist. The two lux-uries of Western civilization anti-Semitism and negrophobicare denied us."

That is vintage Golden, with the bubbles still in the seltzer even after all this time.

More Bengals Pass Pickets

Setback for NFL Players

NEW YORK, July 17 (NYT).

The National Football League Players Association received two small jolts yesterday in its strike against the owners.

One came when two more Cincinnati players reported to training camp at Wilmington, Ohio, bringing to 14 the number of experienced Bengals who had defied the union. It was the biggest defection among the 26 clubs.

The other came when Philadelphia's established players attempted to arrange practices at the team's home field in Veterans Stadium. The NFL Management Council, representing the owners, told the Eagles to close the park to the players until the strike was settled.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for James Scearce, the federal mediator in Washington, said he expected a renewal of negotiations

Little Progress

The two sides met in Washington last Friday for seven hours, but only one hour was spent in direct negotiations between the players and manage-ment. Scearce told them to adjourn and reassess their positions. The executive committee of the Management Council, headed by John Thompson, held a "work session" yesterday, one of a series of discussions it has conducted since the strike began July 1. The committee also said it had

Thompson. "The Players Association people have been meeting in Washington all weekend. I would hope they're doing the same thing we are and that they'd be ready to come to the table in a day or two."

So far the Bengals were the only team with a large contingent of seasoned players defying the strike. The latest to report to training camp were Jim Le-clair, linebacker, and Tim George, wide receiver.

Strike Too Costly

Meanwhile. Cincinnati's player representative, Pat Matson, a guard, said something would have to give soon in the strike because few players "could afford a pro-longed strike; moybe 5 per cent could."

Matson and nearly 20 players held their own camp at a weedinfested high school field. They said they would seek a better liela.

The Eagle players couldn't work out anywhere after Thompson had told the club the only training site open to the players was the official facility, Widener College in Chester, Pa.

The decision angered Philadelphia's owner. Leonard Tosc. "I don't know what the council has accomplished," he said. "It seems to me that, in effect, our players defied the union. The union told them don't go to practice. We should welcome this

News, Views on Beach

EAST HAMPTON, N.Y.—Many people are discovering this summer that it isn't what you read but where you read it that counts. This was dramatically illustrated last weekend at East Hampton, Long Island. I was lying on the beach and the only thing between me and the Atlantic Ocean was a roung lady in her 20s trying to get a suntan. In order to do this she Buchwald lay on her stomach with the top half of her bathing suit undone. This, I assumed, was so that she would get an even tan. As long as the stayed in her position there ves nothing to see but her back. But you never know what can happen on a beach.

"I see," my wife said, reading the paper, "that the failure of the SALT talks means that both superpowers are going to go full steam ahead on offensive mis-

"What a pity." I said. caw it. my best bet would be if some little kid ran by and accidentally showered sand on the girl, forcing her to turn her body to find out what was going on.

My wife turned a page. "The bank rates are up to 12 per cent and now they're predicting they'll go up to 13 per cent. Herb Stein, the President's economic adviser, says the only one to blame for inflation is the American people. Do you think we're really respon-

France Stops 260,000 In Safe-Vacation Drive

PARIS, July 17 (Reuters) .--Police have stopped 260,000 per-sons and asked them for their papers in 30 operations that led to 309 arrests throughout France in the past month, the Interior Ministry said yesterday.

About 18,000 policemen were involved in the checks, from June 11 to July 10. The operation included roadblocks on key routes. and checks on nightelubs and bars. More than 120,000 cars were stopped and 1,990 summonses were issued. The state radio said the purpose of the drive was to make the summer vacation period case for travelers.

"If he says so," I replied. There was another hope. If some bather came out of the ocean wringing wet and dropped water on her back, the shock of it might make the girl sit up.

"The White House transcripts don't jell with the ones released by the House Judiciary Committee," my wife read. "Mr. Nixon certainly looks like he knew a lot more about Watergate than he admitted. Why is it taking them so long to impeach him?"

"That's a good question." I answered. My only other hope would be a cloudburst. The icy raindrops would certainly make her panic.

"It says here," my wite continued, "that Mr. Nixon's strategy, if the Supreme Court makes him turn over the tapes, will be to stonewall Jaworski, by saying it will take a lot of time to find the tapes and edit them. In that way the House Judiciary Committee won't have time to hear all the evidence before they're forced to vote. All he's doing is stalling. Doesn't it make you furlous?"

"Live and let live, I always

"You don't seem very excited about the news." my wife said. "I am, I am. Why is Mr. Nixon stonewalling Herb Stein? "He isn't stonewalling Stein:

he's stonewalling Jaworski." "Hmmm," I said. The dear girl seemed to be asleep. My only hope now was that she'd have a bad dream and wake up startled. My wife continued reading the paper out loud. The National Football League strike is still on. You might not be able to see the Redskins this fall." "If you've seen one football game, you've seen them all," I "Are you all right?" she asked.

"I'm fine. My neck hurts a little from the sun." "You know," my wife said, "she's not going to more."

"Who?" I pretended to be sur-"That topless floozie over there." She folded up her newspaper neatly. "Anyway even if she moved, it wouldn't have done you any good."

Why not?" "Pecause," she said sweetly. "I would have kicked sand in your

'The Loyalists have never been given a fair shake historically. They were the conservatives of their day and fell back on their moral obligations to the crown.

Fighting the Revolution 200 Years Later

By Israel Shenker

NEW YORK (NYT).—As the United States prepares for the bicentennial, a wealth of new books and monographs is revising the case for those who opposed the Revolutionary heroes. The most celebrated of all Loyalists is the subject of Bernard Bailyn's new book, "The Ordeal of Thomas Hutchinson" (Harvard University Press). Prof. Bailyn documents the case for Hutchinson and his office-holding relatives and the case for his most notable opponent. John Adams, Descendants of these protagonists are still fighting it out two centuries later. Andrew Oliver, an urbane conservative who talks of today's "rabble," is the great-great-great-great-grandson and hamesake of Boston's Stamp Act administrator. That earlier Oliver was Hutchinson's brother-in-law.

Thomas B. Adams, an urbane liberal who retired from busine and ran for the U.S. Senate on a peace platform in 1966, is the great-great-great-great-grandson of John .dams. That earlier Adams called Hutchinson-Oliver nepotism and multiple office-holding "foundation sufficient on which to erect a tyranny."

There's a tremendous amount of study on the Revolution in general," said Prof. Bailyn, "and it turns out that the Loyalist side is relatively undeveloped. That makes it very attractive to a lot of people trying to find studies to make." "The Loyalists have never been given a fair shake historically." said Mr. Oliver. "They were the conservatives of their day and iell back on their moral obligations to the crown. The same thing happened today. We've been through the rufflan stage. A good parallel can be drawn between the Kent State shooting and the Boston Massacre. Certainly the poor National Guard wasn't out to murder students. Of course, some terrible mistakes The rabble in the 18th century had something to offer, the rabble here, two or three years ago, had no alternative to offer." "I don't have any sympathy for the Loyalists," said Mr. Adams. "I always connect them with rightists and Nixonites and people sympathetic to the war in Vietnam. I don't see how anybody with my name could have sympathy with them." There is now a formal program for Loyalist studies and publications, and Mr. Oliver expects great knowledge to emerge. "It grew out of my talking too much." said Robert East, professor of history at the graduate school of the City University of New York. "I said, "You'll never understand the American Revolution until you understand the Loyalists."

Prof. East is the program's executive director, and he has collected about 5,000 reports of Loyalist historical sources. He has also collected researches and an international board with Canadian and English members. Defining the term Loyalist is still a problem for historians.

What is a Loyalist? "Wretched question," said Prof. Bailyn. "Is he a Tory-a Was he a refugee—someone who was conservative person? displaced? I would say a Loyalist is a person who took some active measure against the American Revolution."

At first the historians were themselves participants in events they described and saw black and white, heroes and villains, Prof. Ballyn suggested. Later came what Prof. Ballyn, in an interview, termed "the most mature kind of historiography where you see the whole and it becomes tragic.".

"There's no animus left in this," he seid. "The documentation now available is at such a level that you can't make a partisan view the way you did in the 19th century, or you get slaughtered in the scholarly reviews. There's an obligation on the part of anyone who writes on the Revolution to investigate the story, not to make Loyalists fools or villains but to take

"Today we don't think of bad guys and good guys," said Prof. East. "I would besitate to condemn anybody. I'm not the recording angel. I'm not God. But I can pity the Loyalists: They paid a great price, they lost everything."

About 3,200 Loyalists made claims on Britain (many were compensated for Revolutionary losses), and about 20,000 fought in the British Army.

John Adams guessed that a third of the colonial population had been Loyalist, but today a fifth seems a reasonable estimate.

About 22,000 Loyalists and their families fled the colonies and went to Canada, and today New Brunswick is known as the Loyalist province.

Canada, raw and forbidding, was not for the likes of Hutchinson, and he—with 8,000 others—fled to England and sorrow there. "He loved America, he loved Massachusetts, and life in England was a torture to him," said Prof. Ballyn. "He was a very impressive guy, honest, diligent, but morally dead." Hutchinson (1711-1780) was perhaps his century's master at accumulating the fruits of office on his own family tree. "There were seven intermarriages, so the Hutchinsons and Olivers were one family." said the contemporary Andrew Oliver, a retired lawyer, who lives in Boston. "Everybody had offices, so between them they had all "All my forebears were on the payroll and, at least in theory, honest men. They were Loyallats as a matter of conscience. Certainly the poor devil who had to levy the stamp tax urged the government in England not to impose it, but since he was a reasonable man, a loyal supporter of the crown, he had to enforce it." "Benjamin Franklin is supposed to have said about John Adams, 'always honest, often wise, occasionally absolutely mad.' noted Thomas Adams, who lives in Lincoln, Mass. "I suppose I could say the same of my friend Andy Otiver, 'always honest, often wise in his judgments, absolutely mad in his politics.'

"Andy Oliver is as ardent a Republican as I am a Democrat He's corresponding secretary of the Massachusetts Historical Society (Adams is president), and we get along very well on all matters except politics. He thinks I'm a wild-eyed radical, and I think he's a Tory, the only dyed-in-the-wool, absolute Tory that I know."

"He would say I was a Tory," said Mr. Oliver, "but I'm an ordinary humble American. Tom is a liberal, and if the Revolution were to happen over again, Tom's side and our side would be divided just as they were then."
